Director's Monthly Update

We in the School of Continuing Studies like to say that a Redlands education is for everybody. But, some of you may be asking, what is a Redlands education? For us, it means small classes, personal connections to instructors, an emphasis on experiential learning, and a focus on community engagement and social justice. We want all of our students, no matter their field of study, to be compelled to think more broadly about their work - to recognize how they can use their studies to help others and to move to a more just world. As we work toward growth and expansion in SCS, we endeavor to bring conversations about equity and social justice into every program we offer. One way we are doing this is by developing a specific social justice pathway that includes LGBTQ+ Leadership, Mental Health and Spirituality, Racial Justice, and Anti-Racism. Courses offered in these programs will eventually serve as an important supplement for all of our partnerships with the schools - Business, Education, and Theology. We hope you all will take advantage of this unique educational experience to expand your own perspectives and to make yourselves more marketable in a rapidly changing workplace that is demanding more than ever an emphasis on inclusive excellence.

RACIAL JUSTICE - ANTI-RACISM COURSE

We at the University of Redlands recognize the need for continued action around the issue of racial justice. This project, which will eventually be a four-course certificate program, will allow us to contribute to the healing of our university campus and the Redlands community.

We hope that you'll consider enrolling in our course, Anti-Racism, to begin to learn about the history of racism in this nation and be part of the healing process.

Who Should Join Us?

- CAS Students
- Johnston Students
- Graduate Students
- Local Community Members
- Alumni & friends living anywhere in the world
- Teachers
- Doctors
- Business Owners
- Anyone who is interested in having real conversations about race in America

This course will give students the opportunity to develop and strengthen skills in learning and discussing the history of racism in America, how it presents in America today, and practical steps towards decriminalizing Blackness, and becoming an anti-racist country. Learners can use this course to devise methods to critically understand racism, effectively address it, and overcome violence and complacency within racist structures.

This course will be offered from March 1 - April 16 and is being taught by Alesha Knox.
