THE PROGRAM
Today we live in a world of media, new and old, which bombard us with information, stimuli, and images. In Media and Visual Culture Studies, you have the opportunity to engage critically with a wide array of historical and contemporary media, from the printing press to post-network television. In MVC classes, you will learn to interpret media texts and forms, evaluate different kinds of engagement with media, and understand the ways in which media and visual culture help to organize day-to-day experience, societal mores and expectations, patterns of consumption, and notions of cultural value. The ability to make effective critical judgments about media and visual culture informs responsible citizenship and is essential to innovation in professional life.

Learning outcomes for this program may be found at: www.redlands.edu/BA-MVC/learning-outcomes.

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS (MVC)

101 Introduction to Media and Visual Culture Studies.
Fall (4), Spring (4).
Introduces students to the critical study of visual culture and the spectrum of media. Provides basic grounding in the critical analysis of film, broadcast media, and new media, introducing techniques of formal, semiotic, and feminist analysis, etc. and approaches such as reception theory.

111 Introduction to the Art of Film.
Fall (4), Spring (4).
This course introduces students to the primary visual, aural, and narrative conventions used in the creation of film, including editing, mise-en-scène, sound, cinematography, and digital effects. By developing a core set of analytical skills around observation, students will learn some of the ways that films become meaningful for their audiences.
Offered as needed.

201 Writing on Media and Visual Culture.
Fall (4), Spring (4).
This writing-intensive course is designed to help students to hone their ability to think and write critically about film, television and other media, develop research skills, and cultivate their ability to write a sustained paper without a fixed topic or assignment. Focus of course subject matter varies.
202 Visual Storytelling.
Spring (4).
Explores the means of creating narrative through media with a central visual component, chiefly still photography and digital filmmaking. Students will analyze effective visual storytelling, and will devise, make, and edit a series of exploratory exercises, developing awareness of techniques proper to the medium.

203 Screenwriting.
Fall (4).
This course serves as an introduction to screenwriting for feature films and television. Work includes critical examination of screenplays and finished films, and both critical and exploratory writing, including a group television assignment and a first draft of a first act of a feature screenplay.

211 Screen Genres.
Fall (4), Spring (4), May Term (3).
Introduces the concept of genre and how it has been understood in film and media studies, exploring the basis for generic categorization, engaging with debates over contested categories (such as film noir, the women’s film, and melodrama), and examining specific instances of one or more genres. Offered as needed.

213 Sports, Media & Culture.
Fall (4), Spring (4).
Analyzes the relationship between sport and its coverage and representation in print, radio, film, television, and now the Internet, and how that convergence has influenced various cultural dynamics. Offered as needed.

264 Special Topics in Visual and Media Studies.
Fall (4), Spring (4), May Term (3).
Focuses on special topics, themes, or projects in the fields of visual and media studies, including courses that combine critical and creative or production elements. May be repeated for credit given distinct topic. Offered as needed.

395 Media Theories.
Fall (4). Spring (4).
Addresses critical and theoretical concerns that define critical film, media and visual studies: specific focus will vary. Offered as needed.

495 Senior Seminar.
Fall (4).
The capstone experience, an advanced seminar in which students integrate and extend skills and knowledge previously developed in the major. Specific focus will vary between iterations. The culminating assignment is a significant piece of mentored research, usually in an extended paper (or another project approved by the instructor).
